The First Freedom

We of America, fighting a grim global war, understand precisely why we are fighting. There is very little fuzzy thinking on that subject. We are fighting in order that we are fightnig in order that we may continue to exist as a nation of free people. We are fighting because, if we do not fight, somebody, or some group of somebodies, will lick the tar out of us. If that should happen our conquerors would so abridge our freedoms of speech, assembly, worship and press that we would become little more than a vassal state.

As a free people it is given to us to understand that we must now suffer some abridgements of these very freedoms which we are fighting to preserve. There is nothing strange or misleading in this. Prosecution of a total war requires total methods. We do not have to like these abridgements in order to endure them cheerfully, and without indulging in maudlin self-pity. No one is seriously trying to compel us to like such un-American things as scarcities and rationing; censorship and dehydrated "news;" red tape and voluminous reports; heavy taxes and mounting debts; the drafting of our men and women for perilous duties in far-off lands. Insofar as these things are leading to a speedy and victorious conclusion of the war every American accepts them without criticism.

But, because we are Americans, it is natural for us to garnish even the raw and unsavory dish of war with liberal dashes of idealism. We are an idealistic nation, even though we have not infrequently slipped two paces backward for every faltering step forward. And so we are sustained in our present struggle by the thought that we are fighting, not alone for survival, but for freedom of speech and religion; freedom from want and fear. These are great and worthy objectives and they are well worth fighting for.

Suppose we add to the list still another freedom—equally as American as the four just named—and see where we come out. Because it is the fundamental freedom let us put it at the head of the list and call it the First Freedom.

The First Freedom is Freedom of Enterprise!

This Freedom is based upon the premise that men are created for great achievement. It is based upon the copy-book maxims that honesty and patient striving have their reward; that ingenuity and personal talent are priceless assets if properly nurtured; that no man is poor save he who is without hope.

It is based upon the premise that there is nothing inherently vicious or detrimental to the American way of life in the enlightened use of capital, the profit system, and personal ambition. Rather, it holds that these are the very things that have made America great.

It is based upon the fundamental convictions that free speech and free religion are only possible in a land of free enterprise; that freedom from want is best guaranteed by allowing men to get a firm

Mrs. Georgene Kidward was the victim of an accident a few days ago, which although serious might have been fatal. Exact details are lacking as she was alone in the pump house when in some way she became entangled in the belt and was so severely bruised and battered that she had little recollection of how it happened.

MOTHERS' DAY

In the years since the dedication of one specific day on the calendar to honor mothers for their self-sacrificing devotion to sons and daughters, there has been no year when mothers have been due more honor than Now. There has been no year when their sacrifice has been greater. No year when more tears have been shed in the sleepless, worry-ridden hours, or when more mothers' prayers have been murmured for the safety of sons facing deadliest danger.

For every clear-eyed youngster who leaves his home to learn the ghastly lessons of war and help protect his country, a mother's heart is dealt a scarring blow which only his safe return can erase. Every day and every night the prayers of millions of American mothers follow their sons across the world, beseeching divine Providence for their safety. Thousands of American mothers who already have lost their sons in the battle for freedom, wear their courage and their pride as badges across their hearts—hearts that are crushed and never will be whole again.

This is the day, of course, for every person to reflect a little on the devotion of his own mother, to prove his pride in her if she is here, to honor her in his thoughts and actions if she is not. But more than that, it is a day to honor all mothers, most especially those who have sent their sons to meet the enemy and those unfortunate, saddened few who have lost them. It seems to us that the greatest sacrifice being made in the world today is made by mothers. May God bless them.

PRAISE AND THE PRESS

Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, voiced praise of newspapers' aid in the scrap drive last fall, in an address to the annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers association last week. Even while government sometimes decries the necessities of news coverage, it acknowledges its indebtedness to the newspaper for placing before the public, whom it serves, necessary information.

It was revealed by the advertising council of the association that newspapers last year contributed more than $26 million in space for advertising War Bonds, half the amount being given by patriotic advertisers the other half by the papers themselves.

Advertising through the medium of newspapers has gained ground. Most firms, who take a long view of things, have continued to advertise firm names even while company products were converted into tools of war.

Free enterprise and a free press are indissolubly one. How much real knowledge of the world at large and our own part of it in particular should we have, without newspapers to disseminate news and advertising to apprise use of our opportunities? Government can well afford to praise a free press for its patriotic efforts—and our press generously praises free enterprise for its continuance in advertising under the stress of war.

PEDESTRIAN POINTERS

In California, the pedestrian is king. He has the right of way, and if he crawls sleepily across a street, the driver of a vehicle must politely stand by and let him do it. Even California's dogs know this and usually do their sleeping in the middle of the road!

But these days, gas is scarce, and brakes aren't what they used to be. So—please! Look both ways! Don't take so much for granted! There's a war on. We're all moving fast and pedestrian slowness is a real menace to the war effort.

POTATOES AND PLANES!

The farmers' crops are beginning to come in now, and a conservative estimate sets net farm income for 1943 in California at $800 million. That means farmers can enlarge the "field" of their activities from planting, cultivating, and reaping to "raising" planes, tanks and bombers for the armed forces, along with potatoes!

The CCD—Commodity Check Deduction Plan to you—has been arranged by the U. S. Treasury Department to provide a simple and convenient method whereby the farmer may make regular savings and investments in War Bonds.

CCD simply means a method of payroll deduction similar to that used by thousands of employees country-wide. Farmers receive their income in lump sums and often find many immediate uses for their coin. CCD enables them to add regularly to their financial umbrellas for post-war rains — the needs that will arise for improvements, and conversion to peacetimes.

Hundreds of the leading purchasers of farm produce—processors, packers, cooperative-marketing associations—have agreed to set up the essential machinery to operate CCD.

The success of the undertaking will depend upon patriotic volunteering of the farmers to have their crop payments placed under this plan. War Bonds purchased now send bombers over Tokyo, but return as farm purchasing power, when war ends.

POISON GAS

Nearly four years of war have passed without the use of poison gas by the Axis. This most dreaded weapon of war has been held in reserve and used as a threat with intent to frighten us. Thus far, however, it has been used only by the Japanese in a few air raids over China, according to Chinese reports.

Germans began the use of poison gas in World War I, twenty-eight years ago. It was used first against the French at Langemarck in 1915, against the Canadian forces two days later. Even then, its use was prohibited by international agreements on the conduct of war. Which was why the Germans used it. They knew their opponents would not be prepared against it.

Lately the Germans have mentioned their intention to use it again. But they will think twice now, in view of the round the clock bombing from the air to which Germany is being subjected. They know we will retaliate. Such retaliation would be costly beyond belief to German morale, for the German nature feeds on success, is easily discouraged by suffering.

ITALIAN PURGE

Hot news from Italy indicates a shake-up in Il Duce's administration to the extent of all former members of the party administration barring Mussolini himself. Is this because Germany must use Italian navy escort in evacuating Tunisia and Italy wasn't too anxious for that?

CHINA'S LIDICE

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's information that Japanese troops killed every man, woman, and child, in every coastal area where the American flyers who bombed Tokyo had landed reveals Japan's necessity to make bombing Tokyo unpopular. Sooner or lateer, Japanese atrocities will be well avenged, but there is a question in many minds as to whether that single bombing never repeated, has been worth what it cost. At least, that is what the Japanese would like us to feel. The importance they attach to discouraging our further efforts in that direction indicate that it is far more important than we guess.

BUY U.S. WAR BONDS AND STAMPS

Where Will Money Come From?

People ask: "Where will the money come from?" to reach the thirteen-billion dollar objective of the Second War Loan. The answer is simple. The people HAVE the income.

When we produce munitions or peacetime goods, or anything else, we likewise produce income. For every dollar of production, there is a dollar of income.

The problem of war finance boils down to this—if individuals and businesses receive more income after taxes than there are things produced for them to buy, then excess funds arise. The government deficit is matched by the combined surplus of everybody else. This surplus should be put into Government securities to wipe out that deficit.

They give their lives . . . You lend your money.

WOMEN AT WAR

Bessie

"All right, Bessie," said the boss of the little factory which was making jackets for soldiers. "Did you want to see me about something?"

The thin middle-aged woman stood up from the chair in the outer office and looked earnestly at the boss with her huge, grave gray eyes.

"It's about this ten percent pledge," she began.

"Oh, that's all right, Bessie," the boss said. "I'd been meaning to speak to you about that. We don't expect you to pledge ten percent of your pay for War Bonds like the others are doing. We know you have a hard time making ends meet since Jake died. Eleven kids, isn't it? That's quite a lot of mouths to feed. Let's see, you make $25.50 a week including overtime, don't you?"

"Yes, sir, but . . ."

The boss smiled.

"Don't give it another thought, Bessie. You've got your hands full now. Uncle Sam knows you haven't got a penny to spare. Don't let it worry you. We understand."

The boss turned to go back into his private office.

"But what I wanted to say was . . ." Bessie raised her voice and the boss looked around. "I wanted to say, would a dollar a week be too little? You see, after we get the living expenses paid, there's just about a dollar a week left. Would they be willing to accept a dollar a week?"

"They'd be more than willing," the boss said quietly. "They'd be proud."

Bessie looked relieved.

"All we have to do is scrimp a little," she said. "I'd feel just terrible if we couldn't give something."

Back in the boss' office a representative of the Treasury Department was waiting. The boss shut the door and sat down.

"I've just seen the greatest single sacrifice I know of," the boss said. "Listen, if you want to hear what American women are made of . . ."

Understand Bomb Explosion Effect?

Earth shock, one of the most dangerous and least understood effects of bomb explosions, endangers large and small buildings of nearly every type of construction and foundation in an area under attack. With the exception of all-steel or concrete frame buildings, all structures are affected to some degree by the vibrational effect, or earth shock, produced by a bomb explosion below the surface of the earth, an effect which is similar to that of a local earthquake, except that earthquake movements may be said to be slower.

Of all France's once vast overseas empire, only barren, hard-baked French Somaliland, in northeast Africa, had not been severed from Axis-captive Vichy by early December. This colony between Italian Eritrea and British Somaliland has 180 miles of northeast African coastline at the vitally important Strait of Bab el Mandeb that leads from the Red sea into the Indian ocean.

THE BOOK MARK

by marty

"Young Lady Randolph" The Life and Times of Jennie Jerome American Mother of Winston Churchill by Rene Kraus.

It was with great interest that I read this book. If you will recall, a year or two ago this author wrote the biography of Winston Churchill, and with equal skill and ability "Young Lady Randolph" comes to life, in his recent book.

Lady Randolph was the daughter of American parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Jerome of Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Kraus depicts Jennie Jerome's childhood vividly and brilliantly and leads her through the years when she became Europe's first lady and Winston Churchill's mother.

A great deal of history, French, Spanish, Prussian, and English, is contained in this volume. History that is not yet old with dust. Lady Randolph lived at a time when great events, political, were happening in her adopted country, in the great city of London. The Boar War occurred, Empress Eugenie was supreme in France, and different and spectacular personages moved through those days that touched the life of the mother of one of our most important and famous men of our day.

Lady Randolph lived a glamorous social life which veiled indomitable work and ever renewed political and literary endeavors, as well as unending devotion to her husband and their sons. She was the trusted companion and co-worker of Lord Randolph Churchill in his efforts to rebuild England's social and political structure. She smoothed the paths of her elder son's early success. John the younger boy, she did not neglect, however, he stands, as it were, in the shade of his brilliant brother.

"Young Lady Randolph" lends a bright and glowing quality to an era that in itself was fascinating, but even more, at this special time, it makes the American mother of Winston Churchill live in our hearts, makes us conscious once again of the ties binding us to our ally in the present war.

ELECTRONICS — THE NEW SCIENCE

SIGHT SEEING AT HOME

THAT long-awaited era in which Americans will do much of their sight seeing at home will be born in post-war America. And we can thank electronics engineers whose work in pre-war television contributed so much knowledge that is extremely important to the Allies in the battles being fought with the Axis nations.

When peace comes, radio manufacturers, now devoting all their facilities to war production, will be prepared to build reasonably priced television sets in large volume, explains Dr. W. R. G. Baker, General Electric vice president. These manufacturers will be clamoring for work to keep employees on the job. And the nation's eight television stations—more will be built rapidly — will open up with full scale programs shortly after war ends.

The television sets built after the war probably will produce pictures in black and white because color television may be too expensive and still has not been worked out to the engineer's satisfaction, Dr. Baker says. Color television will come, he explains, but probably not for some time after the war ends. The size of the picture produced by a television set will depend on public demands, but the average American probably will want a picture 12 to 15 inches square so he can sit seven or eight feet away from the set and enjoy the program.

Television transmitting stations will be located where they will reach the most people, and these stations will be linked together by relaying stations or special coaxial cables. General Electric now has a relay station in operation in the Helderberg Mountains near Albany, N. Y., which picks up television programs from New York City, 126 miles away, and sends them to television sets in the Capitol District of New York State, via the transmitter which broadcasts programs from the Schenectady, N. Y., television station WRGB. This is the nation's first television network.

The Colonel's Checking System

By IRVIN S. COBB

ONE of the most widely known and most popular railroad men of the Western hemisphere has for many years handled the publicity for a Canadian system. He is as popular in the States as he is in the Dominion. Wherever he goes people pay him tribute for his abilities as a story teller, and for his genial and kindly habits generally. Those who know him are always glad to see him when he comes and always sorry to tell him goodbye when he leaves.

Having so many friends and being of so social a disposition, it is almost inevitable that he must do his share of drinking. A few years ago he suffered an attack of illness and the physician who attended him put him on a diet. One of the regulations was that, until further notice he must take no more than one high-ball every twenty-four hours. A few months later he ran down to New York. He called upon a friend and the friend opened a bottle of prime Scotch. As the Canadian refilled his glass for the third time the friend said:

"Look here, Colonel, I thought by the doctor's orders you were allowed to take only one drink for each day."

"Yes, that's right," said the Colonel, "and I'm following instructions. This drink here, for example,"—and he raised the tumbler and gazed upon its delectable amber contents—"this is my drink for August the twenty-first of next year."

Mail centers have been announced by the OPA for the distribution on the Pacific coast in June of War Ration Book No. 3 which provides new stamps to replace those running out in existing books.

The head of the house will fill out the cards, which are pre-addressed to OPA mail centers, for the entire family and post them between June 1 and June 10. Australian Farm Workers

Week-end working bees have proved a boon to Queensland, Australia, agriculturists. During the harvesting season upwards of 5,000 volunteers have been migrating to rural areas each week-end. One instance is reported of a group of 500 men bringing in 5,000 bags of potatoes, 300 bags of onions, and 40 bags of turnips over the holiday.

grip on their own boot-straps: that there is no fear so deadly as the fear of regimentation that chokes and stifles the individuals desire to self-expression.

"California Business—Roll of Honor," a digest-size book just published by Ghost Town News, Knott's Berry Place, Buena Park, California, is a compelling treatise on the First Freedom and, as such, is particularly timely.

The book is a factual story of some 700 business concerns in the Golden State (of which the Campbell newspaper is one) that have weathered the stress of time for fifty years or more. Needless to say, these concerns have survived wars and panics; fire, flood and earthquake; booms and depressions.

All of this makes absorbing reading but the most important phase of the book is the manner in which it drives home to the reader the conviction that these time-honored businesses are, for the most part, the projected shadow of a man, or group of men. There is a fascinating regularity of pattern; patient self-denial, the accumulation of some capital, the launching of a small business, privation, toil, and honest endeavor. Great wealth and size has come with the development of some of them; all of them have grown great in service.

In the reading of it one comes to the inescapable conclusion that these true success stories are convincing proof that the First Freedom is fundamental — that Free Enterprise really works!

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Jensen and daughter, Jean, who have been living in San Diego, where he was engaged in construction work, returned to Campbell the first of the week and are occupying their home on Minna street.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Townsend and small son of Merced, and Mrs. Ruth Hinman and son of Ettersburg, Humbolt county, spent last week with their parents Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Townsend of North Union avenue. Dr. Townsend accompanied his daughter on her return trip home to spend a brief visit with them.

War-Time Arithmetic

Rationing and shortages of food, gas, oil, shoes, etc., returns us to our school days — when arithmetic was a daily necessity.

How can we stretch our food tickets to cover a month? How can we stretch our gas coupons until the next book is received? How can we do this and how can we do that? Arithmetic is certainly needed.

Here's today's important question: "How can we stretch our butter?" Most of us are such confirmed meat eaters that with what seems to us a very few points allocated among meat, butter and cheese, we are going to devote as many points as possible to meat. Stretching our butter will help.

Here's the mathematical answer: One-half pound butter, plus one-half pint top milk or light cream, plus a little cold water, a little salt and half a rennet tablet, gives us a full pound of spread that tastes exactly like butter, goes twice as far and spares your pocketbook too.

This butter stretcher spreads beautifully provided it is not too cold. It's great for bread, toast and sandwiches. It's easily made and most important of all, the butter taste remains in the double-sized amount of spread. Do you use oleomargarine rather than butter? If so, the following recipe appeals to you as much as to the butter user:

Stretching Butter with Rennet-Custard

½ pound (1 cup) good butter or oleomargarine
½ rennet tablet
½ tablespoon cold water
½ pint fresh whole milk (not canned), top milk or light cream
½ — 1 teaspoon salt

Allow butter or oleomargarine to stand in warm place until soft but not melted. Meantime, dissolve the salt in cup of milk or cream, warm slowly stirring constantly. When COMFORTABLY WARM, (110 degrees F.) not hot, remove at once from heat. Add ½ rennet tablet which has been dissolved in ½ tablespoon cold water; stir quickly for a few seconds only. Let stand in saucepan until firm — about 10 minutes. Do not chill.

Add this rennet-custard to softened butter. (If desired, add ¼ teaspoon butter color.) Beat with egg beater until perfectly blended Chill until firm. (Suggest do not make more than week's supply at a time.)

Important — This War Economy Bread Spread is not suggested for frying, sautéing, shortening or greasing pans. Use regular butter or other fats for these.

DEHYDRATION of fruits and vegetables is EASY to do at home

When your Victory Garden produces more fresh vegetables than you can eat...conserve this surplus by DEHYDRATION. When fresh fruits are plentiful and cheap...DEHYDRATE them and seal them in air-tight containers for winter use.

BUILD or BUY a DEHYDRATOR OR SHARE ONE WITH YOUR NEIGHBOR

It is simple and easy to build a small electric dehydrator to dry fresh fruits and vegetables. When a suitable type of electric heater is used, dehydration is not much different than cooking by time and temperature. Quality, color, flavor of home dried foods are excellent, too!

USE YOUR RANGE OVEN AS A DEHYDRATOR

Wooden frames with mesh bottoms are all that is needed to convert your range oven into a successful Home DEHYDRATOR. Preparation of food for dehydration is as easy as for cooking.
